Restraining order against Unfitney!

Britney Spears is a danger to Kevin Federline!

The cops have issued a temporary restraining order against the mother of two, who took her children hostage last week.

Called an "emergency protective order," it is enforced for five business days.

Officers did it to "stabilize the situation," confirmed K-Fed's lawyer, Mark Vincent Kaplan.

It remains unclear whether Federline will seek to extend the restraining order, but for the safety and well-being of those children, he should.

Says Kaplan, "Kevin doesn't want to keep his kids from being involved in [Spears's] life. But foremost is that the kids be in an environment of structure [and] stability. The next goal is to get things to a point where both parents are able to participate fully in their [children's] lives."

For the time being, Spears can't get within 100 feet of Federline. If she does, then she faces arrest.

Do it, Brit! Do it!
